

Stripey Jack and Sage Derby

STRIPEY JACK

This cheese is like a potpourri of traditional English cheeses; Red Leicester, Double Gloucester, Lancashire, Cheddar and Cheshire are combined in five different layers that make up one cheese.

A great delight, with a striking display of red and white layers and wonderful robust flavors from some of England's finest cheeses.

SAGE DERBY

This cheese (pronounced "dahr-bee") is a mild, mottled green, semi-hard cheese with a hint of garden sage running throughout. The first production began in the seventeenth century in England. Sage was added as a highly prized herb, known for its health giving properties.

Sage Derby was only made for festive occasions such as harvest and Christmas, but now it is available all year round.

Singleton's Dairy, makers of these cheeses, began in 1934 when Robert and his wife Duillia Singleton incorporated the company to purchase milk from neighbouring farms. Prior to that time they had been producing fine Lancashire cheese from their own cow's milk at Cromblehome Farm on Beacon Fell in rural Lancashire.
